WE took occasion recently to call attention to the serious inconveniences which have resulted from the hasty passing of the New self. It runs between trim hedges of bright Code for the Supreme Court, that is without evergreens, backed with taller shrubs, many of either framing the rules and orders beforehand or making some definite provision for This fair alley might be the entrance to their being drawn up within a reasonable Bonchurch villa, or to an English mansion a time. It is but fair to the CHIEF-JUSTICE. Cannes. Quite at the extremity we came to upon whom, under existing circumstances, the bloom and blossom of a well-watered south of duty of seeing that this important work be France plane, stands a sarcophagus of white carried out devolves, to notice that until very shortly before the Code was passed, he was not aware that Mr. PAUNCEFOTE would -be-leaving-the-Colony-at-so-early a date- as ultimately proved to be the case; and may at facing the unpretentions but elegant monu all events at the earlier stages of the consideration of the measure, have naturally is at right angles to another, equally well kep counted upon valuable assistance, which as and planted. They bound two sides of the circumstances have turned out, has not been piece of square ground forming the Protestant afforded to him. We can also well excuse a to John Stuart Mill and his beirs for ever by ming-shing to local trade certain amount of delay on the part of an the Municipality, to be used as an approach to in performing a very dry, arduous, and what mortuary emblem. But on those visible Code was that only one branch of the Profession was engaged in drawing it up, and hence a vast amount of technical information which might have been supplied by the Solicitors was lost. At home, the persons who are consulted with regard to all matters of form and procedure are the Masters of the Courts, who are appointed from among the Solicitors; and here, in the absence of such officers, the leading Solicitors of the Colony might reasonably be consulted. An error was clearly committed in the first instance in not doing so; and we think the remedy for the existing difficulty could be found in simply repairing this initial error, as far as it is possible to do so. If the REGISTRAR of the Court, in conjunction with two or more of the best qualified Solicitors of the Colony, were appointed to draw up draft-rules and orders to be finally approved by the CHIEF JUSTICEwho, of course could, where he saw fit, consulthe Assistant Judge—the difficulty which is now constantly recurring might be got over. It is hardly to be expected that the CHIEF JUSTICE can find time for cutering into all the minution of forms and the like details, though it is no doubt highly necessary that his experience should be called into play with regard to them. The plan suggested would meet both objects—and combine the technical experience of the solicitors with the more | Canal running by the garden-gate. As therefore, that some such simple course as is above suggested will be adopted to do away with what is undoubtedly a very pressing evil, as matters stand at the present time.

We hear that the steamer Bengal made-the passage from Amoy to Singapore in a little under eight days, and experienced strong bead winds and head see all the way.

The Colony of Hongkong was invaded yesterday morning, at two o'clock, by about 1,100 Chinese, who all landed at the Canton wharf and Bonham Strand, from the steamers White Cloud and Hanyang, from Canton. They were peaceful invaders, however, as 700 of them spread mats on the wharf, and slept till daylight, not being armed with passes.

With reference to the statement by a corresponcept of the Cloud cannot stow 500, we may point out that this is an entire mistake, as she has repeatedly carried as many as 1,200 in the old days. We learn that on the night in question to the fares were collected from 882 passengers.

A VISIT TO THE LATE MR. MILL'S GRAVE. From the "Daily News" Special Correspondent.) VAUCLUSE, Joly 27th. Before quitting Avignon I went to visit the grave in which John Stuart Mill's remains are ave situated near each other in the stretch of mendows and of market gardens lving between the Ribne and the Vancluse road. fields intersected with open drains, in which sluggishly circulate the turgid waters of the Duridce Irrigation Canal. The gate of the cometery is bet in a semicircular wall of grey stone, massive and severe, surmounted with funereal uses. In the grassy space facing the ponderous door sat the concierges wife mending linen. On bearing what grave wanted to see, she told me that her husband was there watering the flowers. But she added that she would the happy to conduct me thither. Our way lay through a grass-grown avenue, the first to the right of the gate, abaded by vigorous and wide-spreading evergreens of almost wild luxuriance. .On one side is a hedge, with anarrow fringe of plantation dividing the cometery from the dark meadows, and on the other, tombstones, mortnary chapels, mounds, and crosses in stone, in marble, in wood, and in cast iron. The closeness of the graves and the frequent patches of freshly upturned earth bear witness to the insalubrity of the Avignon climate, which many rumours the chances are that one is true, and the present one is causing very much agitation among the Chinese, from whom we believe it sprang. We think, however, we are at liberty to state, and very truthfully, that no intimation of any such event has been received by the foreign Consuls. Both the Chinese newspapers have contained a statement, coming from a Chinese official source we understand, that the negoliations at Peking in regard to the Formosa difficulty had resulted in an arrangement which would not compromise the dignity of either nation. Upon enquiry at the Japanese Consulate, however, we were obligingly informed that Peking despatches received on Sunday make no mention of such a result, and that the statement referred to is believed to be a mistake. The signatures were cleverly imitated, so much so that one of the gentlemen whose names had been used, at first accented the fac-simile as his own handwriting. The forgeries were, we believe, detected by Mr. Holwill, in charge of the Drawback desk at the Custom House: and steps were taken to scize the cargo on its way to be shipped, while the assistance of the British and United States Consulates was invoked to obtain the rendition of considerable quantities already on board two

CHINESE ARSENALS. ..

(N. C. Daily News.) It is characteristic of the Chinese that, after all the money they have spent in the various Arsenals, and after all the parade of warlike material they have displayed, they should at the last moment have been found utterly nn. prepared to cope with so small a Power as Japan. The want of system and of ability to found one is nowhere more conspicuous than in the military preparations of the last few years. The war material in the possession of the Ohinese Government must be something enormous, yet, as it has been collected together on no settled system, it is far more likely to prove an incumbrance than to turn out of any practical use. Armstrong guns, Whitworth guns, deaths will probably never be known: within development for some time, was being moved Woolwich guns, have all and made the plaything of an hour, and now enormous sums are being spent on Krupp's. to go through the same process.
